

YOUNG CAMPAIGNERS . . . Danny Richardson, a member of the Torrance Family YMCA now being trained to work as a campaigner during the current "Y" fund drive, turns in his first contributions—$101—during the first in a series of weekly report meetings. With Danny are Rod Swartz (center) and Joe Wilcox Jr., executive secretary of the YMCA. The teams section has collected $5,339, while the special gifts section turned in $7,250 last week. Goal of the current campaign is $100,000.

Job Experts Find 6,000 New Titles for Listing

Definitions of some 23,000 jobs in the American economy have recently been revised and will soon be put to use by the California Employment Service, according to local office manager June Roper. Mrs. Roper said today that the updated definitions are contained in a new, third edition of the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, The DOT, as the dictionary is known. She pointed out that another 7,000 jobs which have become obsolete or were strikingly similar to other jobs have been dropped from the new edition. "For example," she said, "the second edition listed 130 auto assemblers — the new edition has only three."

DISCUSSING the improved classification structure of the DOT, Mrs. Roper said that jobs may be found by any of four methods in the two-volume job handbook. Volume I lists the 36,000 jobs in alphabetical order by job title. The same jobs are listed in Volume II by occupation, industry, and worker traits.

She said the worker traits arrangement is new to the dictionary, and predicted it would prove vitally important to entry applicants — job seekers with little or no work experience. She said the ma-majority of entry applicants using the employment services are youths between 16 and 21.

The new DOT can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., 20462. The price is $9.25 per set. Volume I and II may also be purchased separately at $5 and $4.25, respectively.
